Miss Vivian Wight entertained 21 members of the primary class of the Congregational Sunday School at a Valentine's party last Friday afternoon. The time was pleasantly passed by playing games. The table decorations and place cards were in keeping with St. Valentine's Day. Miss Wight was assisted in serving refreshments by Miss Madeline Hall.

A dinner party was enjoyed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Edwards on Friday evening of last week, in honor of Mrs. Edwards' birthday. The affair was a complete surprise to the guest of honor and was arranged by Misses Dorothy Edwards and Beatrice Brown. During the dinner hour Mrs. Edwards was presented with a beautiful bouquet of roses. Cards were enjoyed during the evening. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. A. Van Don, Mrs. W. H. Thinston, Arthur Galler, and the host and hostess. Relishments of piquant salmon on toast, heart shaped cakes, and ginger ale ice cream were served by the hostess.

New Silk Underwear and Hosiery, adv., attended.

Gould Wins Two Games

Gould Varsity 49—Norway 18

Gould Seconds 29—Oxford 21

The Gould Academy regulars, without the services of Capt. Jay Willard and George Parsons, both guards, succeeded in giving Norway a second sound trounce.

Tise and Saunders played fine ball

as relief men in the guard positions.

The first quarter saw Norway go

"right into high" and play the locals on equal terms; the quarter ending 12-

10 for Gould. From then on the winners

"stepped out" to steadily increase their lead. In the second quarter Norway scored 1 field goal and two free throws to the locals' 12 points.

In the final half the Gould defense functioned perfectly and kept the visitors to no field goals, their only scores in the final half being four free throws!

The winners collected 25 points during this period bringing the total score to 49-18.

Holmes and Alger scored nine field goals apiece. Holmes also dropped two free throws bringing his total to 20 points. Other scoring was Cheshire,

Tise one and Saunders one.

Saturday night the Gould Second team rallied in the last quarter to hand the highly touted Oxford High School team, winner of 10 out of 11 games this year, a set back 21. It was the most exciting and hard fought game seen on the local floor all season. From beginning to end the lead sawed back and forth with Oxford holding the edge at the half way mark and at the third quarter.

The return game played at Oxford this Friday will be a hard one for the locals because of the small floor and low ceiling.

Stephens as High of Rumford will invade Bethel Saturday evening in an effort to dislodge the league leading

Gould Academy quint. Both teams are undefeated in the League but Gould has annexed five victories while the avad-ers have only three.

Both Stephens and Gould are mentioned by Lawton sports writers as among the best eight teams of Western Maine.

The game Saturday will not only determine the Oxford County championship but will go a long way in improving sports writers who's who for the New England Tournament.

The visitors came with the highly taut Rawlcock at center, and the shifty Bowen at guard. For Gould and Parsons need no introduction. It will be well worth while for any lover of sport to be on hand at the local gymnasium to see those big ol' County feminaries compete.

Rushball fans are expected from

Burntwood, south Pownal, West Paris, Bel-chamont, and surrounding villages.

Folding chairs will be placed on the main floor of the gym in an effort to main the expected crowd. The arena starts promptly at 8 o'clock, and the doors will be open at 7 o'clock. The referee will be Fred L. Edwards.

Admission will be 50¢ for adults and 25¢ for children. The game will be in Middle Interval-ary.

Mr. G. S. Greenleaf was at Jim Bar-nett's camp in Upton Wednesday.

The Eastern Star benefit bridge party

the evening of Feb. 12, was very well attended.

Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Lord enjoyed at a Valentine party, Wednesday,

February 14, the son of Newell and Eliza

Lord, Edward Annis. He married Grace

Stephens of Bethel and one son, Roland, was born to them. Mrs. Annis died when she was a small child.

He is survived by his son, Roland,

one brother, Clarence Annis of Bethel,

one sister, Mrs. Irene Evans of Albany, grandson, and nephews and nieces.

Mr. Business Man

Why not make you appeal for patronage through the columns of this newspaper? With every issue it carries its message into the homes of all the best people of this community. Don't blame the people for flocking to the store of your competitor. Tell them what you have to sell and if your prices are right you can get the business.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Engagement of Anne Morrow and Lindbergh—Doings of Congress.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

JUST as he was landing at Havana on his return flight from the Canal Zone, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's engagement to Miss Anne Spencer Morrow was announced by the young lady's father, Dwight W. Morrow, ambassador to Mexico. The colonel declined to talk about it to the reporters. It was understood in Mexico City that he would fly there later this month and that, though no plans had been made for the wedding, it might take place this spring. Anne is twenty-two years old and vivaciously pretty. She is a graduate of the Chaplin school in New York and of Smith college, and while in school showed ability to write quite good poetry. When Colonel Lindbergh was in Mexico City as the guest of Ambassador Morrow he took Anne for several short flights, but her sister Elizabeth also was his passenger, and the gossipy reporters were uncertain then as to which one might become his fiancee.

Colonel Lindbergh had no sooner landed at Miami from his Central American trip than he started out again on two rescue flights. The first was over the Florida keys in search of a plane from which two persons were taken by a ferry boat after it was forced down; the second was made to try to find the lost Harry Rogers, who had gone in search of the first plane and was himself missing for a time. Concerning the Panama mail route he had just inaugurated, his said:

"There is not a great deal to be done before daily service can be inaugurated between Miami and Panama. Better facilities for communication are being installed and other facilities to aid flying are being put into condition to augment the service."

As to passenger traffic between the North and South Americas, Colonel Lindbergh said it was not planned to haul passengers "until the most minute details of transportation and communication have been worked out."

CONGRESS was asked by the President to appropriate $9,210,500 for the construction of new public buildings in 92 cities scattered throughout the country. This is the amount needed to meet building costs during the first year. The projects which completed would represent an outlay of $40,700,500. Mr. Coolidge also approved budget bureau estimates for the expenditure of $48,000 to remodel and furnish the weather bureau station at Mount Weather, Va., as a summer home for Presidents, this plan being in accord with his suggestion made last fall. Mount Weather, near Belmont, Va., and about 60 miles from Washington, is an 84-acre tract, high in the Blue Ridge mountains, on which the weather bureau, until a few years ago, conducted some of its most important observations.

INTERNATIONAL experts selected to consider the matter of German reparations began on Monday in Paris the conference that is expected to result in a revision of the Dawes plan, the fixing of the total sum Germany must pay and the subsequent evacuation of the Rhineland by the allies. Owen D. Young, one of the unofficial American delegates, was the unanimous choice for chairman, and after the necessary ceremonies he took to work. Germany had its luncheons first and Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the reichsbank, presented his committee's case in a way that seemed to make an excellent effect on all the delegates except the French. He was moderate and made no specific demands but insisted Germany cannot continue to pay the annuities of two and a half billion gold marks provided for by the Dawes plan. He was questioned closely about the tax burdens of Germany, which the allies asserted were less than their own. He offered to prove that this was not true. Dr. Schacht and his associates continued through several days. Correspondents said it was becoming apparent that the French and German points of view were not so divergent as was feared and that the success of the conference seemed assured.

"THIS is the most severe winter Europe has experienced for many scores of years, and the suffering throughout the entire continent is most grievous. Extremely cold weather, deep snowfalls, ice and furious storms prevail. Many human beings have perished, and the loss of life stock is tremendous. Transportation is disorganized in many regions and towns are suffering for food and fuel. Harrowing stories of death and suffering come especially from central Europe."

Naval officials and adequate navy advocates in congress hailed the approval of the bill with enthusiasm. Secretary of the Navy William expressed gratification. In his opinion, the construction of the fifteen-cruiser marks the beginning of a wholesale replacement program which will result in the modernization of the fleet and eventually in an American navy second to none.

Representative Fred A. Britton, chairman of the house naval committee, said his committee will begin new hearings next fall to determine how many more ships should be authorized as replacements for the rapidly aging battleships, cruisers, destroyers and submarines in the battle and scouting fleets.

General Higgins has been chief of staff since 1910. He was born at Highbridge in Somerset and educated at Doctor Morgan's school at Bridgewater, Somerset.

LEON TROTZKY, with his wife and two children, was taken to Constantinople on a Soviet steamer, secretly landed and confined closely in the Russian embassy. It was said the authorities feared he might be attacked by "white" Russian refugees that are numerous there. The campaign against Trotzky sympathizers in Russia continues, the latest incident reported being the closing of the Kronstadt naval academy and the expulsion of its 3,700 students. Twenty of their leaders were arrested as Trotzkyites. A Leningrad paper says the Soviet war commissar discovered lack of loyalty among the students, who are openly discussing the possibility of a new Napoleon appearing in Russia to save the country from the hands of the Communists.

REV. DR. E. S. SHUMAKER, superintendent of the Indiana Anti-Saloon league, is now milking cows and cleaning their stalls on the state penal farm at Putnamville. He suddenly abandoned his long fight against the sentence of sixty days on the farm for contempt of the Indiana Supreme court, and began serving his term. Shumaker was cited for contempt in 1928 by Arthur L. Gilliom, then attorney general, following his criticism of the Antisaloon league publication. He was found guilty by a Supreme court vote of three to two.

MISS BOBBY TROUT went up in the air over Los Angeles and regained the laurels taken from her by Miss Elmer Smith of New York. Bobby not only established a new endurance record for women aviators—17 hours 5 minutes 37 seconds—but also captured the women's night flying and distance records. Bobby is twenty-three years old and flies a Golden Eagle monoplane.

PRESIDENT PORTES GIL of Mexico narrowly escaped death last week when his train was blown up by dynamite in the state of Guanajuato. The explosive had been placed on the track at a point where it ran over a bridge. The fireman was killed instantly when the engine overturned, and two coaches were derailed. Another bomb, unexploded, was found fixed to the track. The attempt at assassination followed closely on the execution of Jose Toral, who murdered General Obregon, and in official circles in Mexico City it was said to be the work of the League of Religious Defense. Several members of that organization were arrested near the scene of the explosion, and it was said a number of prominent persons would be taken into custody.

MOST notable of the week's deaths was that of Lily Langtry, Lady de Bathe, who was for years the leading beauty of the English stage. She passed away at her home in Monte Carlo. The Jersey Lily, as she was known, was a good though not a great actress, and was also a clever theatrical manager. In the days when King Edward was the prince of Wales and her admiring friend she was prominent in English social affairs, and she was also well known in the United States.

John II, prince of the little state of Lichtenstein and dean of ruling monarchs, died at a ripe old age and was succeeded by his brother.

ROME was en fete the beginning of the week because of the signing on Monday of the peace pact between the Vatican and the Italian state. There were imposing ceremonies, gay celebrations and exchanges of rich gifts and decorations. The general feeling throughout the world is that Premier Mussolini scored a great triumph in the negotiation of the peace, settling an old and troublesome dispute with little expense to Italy.

WEST BETHEL

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Bennett were in Lewiston one day last week.

Mrs. Estella Goodridge went to New Haven, Conn., Saturday, called there by the illness of Mrs. Joseph Maddocks.

Miss Eloye Yashaw spent the week end with her aunt, Mrs. F. O. Roberton at Bethel.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brown of Auburn, spent Sunday with her father, N. M. Scribner.

Miss Madlyn Bell of South Paris spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Barlow.

Mr. and Mrs. Byron Abbott of Auburn were Sunday guests of relatives in town.

Eugene Andrews of Norway spent Sunday with Evander Whitman and family.

George Bennett has finished work in Grifton and is staying in town.

Miss Helen Harta is boarding with Mrs. Carroll Abbott.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Head spent Sunday in Andover, the guests of her parents.

Charles McInnis of Milan, spent the week end at his home here.

The ones who have been ill with the flu are convalescing rapidly.

IT WAS HOME

The evening board was spotless clean.

The floor was worn and gray.

The chairs were shaved from woodland trees.

By grandpa, bent by labor's day.

Two stalwart lads sat by the fire,

A red-cheeked lad was hustling tea,

The dame was sprinkled with flour

Making biscuits for her man and me.

This was in the shadow of a hill,

A winter night when I did roam.

The scene to you might not appeal,

But it was fair and it was home.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

NO BUSINESS reaches out into so many remote places of the world as does that of the pharmacist, a fact which it will be remembered was demonstrated graphically during the World war when the commerce of the world was disrupted.

Consider as a typical case, asafoetida gum. Much of it comes from the city of Herat in Afghanistan. Numerous citizens of Herat make their living by going down yearly midway between the mountains and the Persian desert, after the rains, clothe the plains with verdure, there, with much back-breaking to incise the Perula root. From the indusions comes a milky gum, which, dried, forms the asafoetida of commerce.

Throughout history man has combed the out-of-the-way places for his drugs. It was the trade in drugs and spices which made Venice from the thirteenth to the sixteenth century the most important commercially and the richest city in Europe, and it was the loss of this commerce which caused her rapid decadence and the passing of her riches and her glory.

The story of Venice is so essentially romantic that to mention commerce in connection with it seems out of drawing. Yet it was as merchants that the Venetians were famed. The traffic in spices and aromatic drugs began to assume vast proportions in the Middle ages, as the people of Europe became educated to a hunger for the spicy flavors of the East. From India and China and Persia came not only silks and laces, but more important, spices and oils and drugs, and Venice was quick to realize the importance of having this commerce pass through her port.

The knowledge of medicine, used by the Moors and Arabs, which was brought back by the Crusaders, helped to educate the people of many lands to the uses of balsams and spices of the oriental markets. The embarkation point for Palestine was Venice. The Venetian merchant marine profited well by furnishing transport service, and during the Fourth Crusade, finding the Crusaders unable to pay their passage money, the Venetians forthwith enlisted them as soldiers in a war against their Christian neighbors, the Dalmatians, and the Infidels got off scot-free!

Columbus Was After "Spices."

The monopoly of Venice was represented, as is inevitable, this prosperity was envied. This is why all the explorers of that period sought a short ocean route to India. Columbus, it will be remembered, sought the "spices of the Indies" rather than a new land. So from the home when, on May 20, 1498, Vasco da Gama fulfilled the ambition of his Portuguese sovereign, blazed a new trail in the uncharted deep and sailed into Calicut, after rounding Cape of Good Hope, the commercial greatness of the Italian port was doomed.

When the news reached Venice that Portuguese caravans laden with spices had come into the harbor at Lisbon without the necessity of touching at Venice "the whole city was disturbed and astounded," says the ancient chronicler, Prichard, in his day. They had ample cause for worry, for they faced the inevitable.

Now Venice warred on Portugal; of the later wars between Portuguese, Spanish, Dutch and English to assert supremacy in the spice and drug trade; of the long voyages with destruction of the crews by pirates by mutineers, and by the often fatal and always horrible scenes of savagery these tales belong to the heroic age of the seas, and have furnished inspiration to many a poet and novelist.

Well may poets sing of Drake and Hawkins, and Grooteville, and Oronham meeting, with their little galleons laden with cloves and nutmegs, the great galloons of Spain and Portugal, the great galleys of the East, defeating them! But the prizes they captured were galloons laden with cloves, and ginger, and pepper, and cinnamon, and dragon's blood, and nutmegs, and when these cargoes were found they asked not for ransom.

Motley, in his "History of the United Netherlands," emphasizes this point very well. "The world had lived in former ages," he says, "very comfortably without cloves." But in Augusta—Sixteen Maine water companies seek authority to consolidate in newly formed corporation of Maine State Water & Electric Companies.

Boothbay Harbor branch of the Augusta Trust Company may merge with Boothbay Savings Bank in near future.

As there is nothing new under the sun, another factor tells about the light Russian oil which now, when it is refined, we prize so highly as a medicine: "There is a great river," he wrote, "which falls into the Caspian sea by a town called Bachu whereunto which is a strange thing to behold. For there issuing out of the ground a large quantity of oil; which oil they fetch from the uttermost bounds of all Persia, it seethes all the country to burn in their houses. This oil is black and is called nyte. There is also by the said town of Bachu another kind of oil which is white and very precious; it is supposed to be the same that is here called petroleum." Today men are competing for this oil as in the day they fought for cloves!

Camphor, which is important not only in medicine but in the arts and manufactures, was an example of efficient production and control of output. After the Far Eastern war Japan obtained control of the Formosa camphor industry. Although the Portuguese forests are practically inexhaustible, forestry measures were instituted for replanting and care of trees; 2,000 police were furnished to protect workers and large refining plants were built. Workers were paid a fixed sum. The distribution of the entire product was lot by contract and the right of sale awarded to the English firm, the latter contracting to conduct the sale of camphor in New York, London, Hamburg and Hong Kong, and to accept from Japan a definite amount of camphor each year. Today a growing part of the camphor used in the West is being made in western laboratories.

Batavia's Days of Glory.

Batavia, as of old, is still a great export center for the spice and drug trade; as it was when it was fortified as the capital of the "Spice Islands," and was known as the "Queen of the East." In those days, when every sea voyage was a perilous undertaking, it was only natural that a warlike community should assemble in such a place. And no pirates nor soldiers of fortune and adventurers from all parts of the world gathered about its banks and in its white walls, besides Dutch and Japanese, many German, Portuguese, French, Chinese and others, for of course, being a Dutch port, it was intersected by canals, making a rich community, it was founded.

Well may poets sing of Drake and Hawkins, and Grooteville, and Oronham meeting, with their little galleons laden with cloves, and ginger, and pepper, and cinnamon, and dragon's blood, and nutmegs, and when these cargoes were found they asked not for ransom.

Motley, in his "History of the United Netherlands," emphasizes this point very well. "The world had lived in former ages," he says, "very comfortably without cloves." But in

Rev. and Mrs. A. C. Townsend were supper guests last Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Morgan. All other cases are nearly well.

Fuel system of the new Ford has been designed for reliability

and long service

The practical value of Ford simplicity of design is especially apparent in the fuel system.

The gasoline tank is built integral with the cowl and is unusually sturdy because it is made of heavy sheet steel, terne plated to prevent rust or corrosion. An additional factor of strength is the fact that it is composed of only two pieces, instead of three or four, and is electrically welded—not soldered.

Because of the location of the tank, the entire flow of gasoline is an even, natural flow—following the natural law of gravity. This is the simplest and most direct way of supplying gasoline to the carburetor without variations in pressure. The gasoline feed pipe of the new Ford is only 18 inches long and is easily accessible all the way.

The gasoline passes from the tank to the carburetor through a filter or sediment bulb mounted on the steel dash, which separates the gasoline tank from the engine.

The carburetor is especially designed and has been built to deliver many thousands of miles of good service.

Have your Ford dealer look after these important little details for you when you have the car oiled and greased. A thorough, periodic checking-up costs little, but it has a great deal to do with long life and continuously good performance.

THE REVOLVER AND THE PORCUPINE

The other day, one of our young men accidentally shot himself with a revolver. He was hunting porcupines. Not a season passes in which other young men fail to haul a gun out of a canoe, through a fence or a hedge, and death results. Didn't know it was loaded, toll but too often.

It chanced that the very day I read of that fatality I talked with a Boston doctor, all aglow with memories of a recent hunting trip in Maine with half a dozen others. "We were after porcupines," he said. "You know how destructive they are in our forests. We had a great time of it! Got about twenty, and some raccoons."

"Also a buck," I suggested. "Oh, yes, that also. I saw 12 before I got my shot at him, but it was worth it. He dropped in his tracks."

"Why not some of the rest?" I asked. "Too far, or too indistinct, I want to know what I am shooting at. Yes, I know what you would say. Two years ago I dropped buck in Canada at 800 yards. That deer never had a chance." Tom, I said to my guide, "That is the last deer I'll ever kill with a rifle. It is no sport as slaughtering a Jersey cow!" "What did you mean?" I asked, just to draw him out.

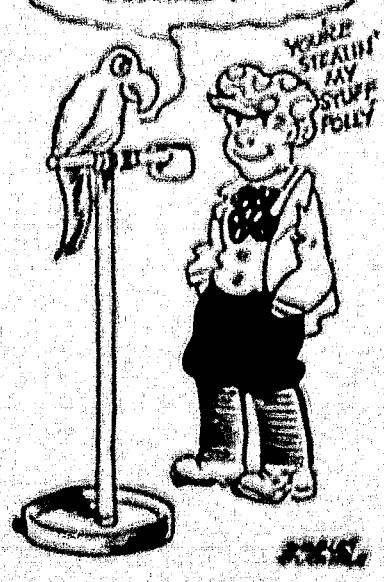

"The long bow of our forefathers!" he said. "We all had them; and it is fun alive. One arrow from it was enough for any porcupine. At any range from sixty yards down it is sure death for any deer, and beyond that, too, but who like to make very sure. You get a thrill like nothing else when you follow your arrow's flight, say, six seconds for 100 yards and know on the instant whether you have made your hit behind the shoulder where you meant it. You don't have to wait for blood marks in case your deer goes suddenly out of sight. If you should miss, even as the best of us do with a rifle now and then, with the bow you'll get another shot. Best of all, in camp or on the trail it is almost absolutely fool-proof, so far as the user is concerned. As a doctor that appeals to me. Why, do you know? There are four clubs all over this country, now, indoors in winter, tuning up for spring. I saw some mighty good shooting at the Spurrier's show here last month, by buskey men and by women too! And they had a 25 yard range for it there. There's a club about in Bangor doing just that thing. When winter time comes next year, don't I'd like to get away and do with them?"

Then a death during our outdoor excursion to the southland, and we took our several roads with the gun, saddlebags. But I thought it was necessary for that boy to have a go porcupine hunting, so I suggested, when with the family, that he had no such taste in hunting.

The TOWN DOCTOR

(The Doctor of Towns)

SAYS

KNOW YOUR ATMOSPHERE

Two men were driving a beautiful winding roadway through a rolling wooded country when rounding a curve they suddenly came upon a number of cars at a standstill.

There was no accident, there was no police officer, but no barrier of stoutest iron or electrified steel, no highway's "Road Closed" or "Bridge Out" could have been more effective; cars eastbound and "westward ho" stand still as if cementbound to the pavement, for a mother Seganku had chosen this arterial highway for an ostentatious promenade of her progeny.

That mother polecat and a lot of little polecats were going places, and in their going, behemoths of gasoline-driven iron and steel—brothers in creation of odiferous atmosphere whose path she crossed, became as statues.

With a glance neither to right nor left she led her little family across the highway, while a score or more of earthly dwellers looked on with awe and apprehension, and marveled at her boldness and determination.

There is no doubt but that many of her kind had ventured to cross that road but had faltered after starting and had, therefore, been annihilated; others had looked across the highway and wished they were on the other side; others had peered out at the whizzing automobiles and turned back with fear and trembling in their hearts, and many more were content to stay where they were. But this little "kitty" knew the power of her atmosphere, decided to get somewhere, made known her intentions, started, kept on going, and got to where she was going—the other side of the road.

The moral to communities is this: Recognize the power of YOUR atmosphere (concerted effort—pulling together) decide on what kind of a community you would like yours to be, then start, individually and collectively, thinking and DOING those things that will make it such—looking neither right nor left until you "get" where you are going to."

And remember, that the town that says, "It can't be done" will lose its trade to the town that does it.

ALONG LIFE'S TRAILBy THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.TRAINING AND WEALTH

I have held for many years as I have watched young men grow up, go to school and college and then set up for themselves that training and work combined with character will take any man a long way, and will very likely result in a comfortable and a sense of security which does not come from other things. Men have gotten on and will continue to do so with only meager training and success is fortunately not dependent upon money.

In a recent issue of an eastern paper I read the account of two young men, each one whom most young fellows would have considered fortunate and perhaps foolish for wanting anything more than they had. The names I give are fictitious.

Jones, it was said, at twenty-seven years of age had determined to retire from business. He had gone to work when a young boy, and by hard labor and a lucky turn of circumstances by the time he was twenty-seven years old, had amassed a significant fortune of a quarter of a million dollars. Most men would have been satisfied with the result of his efforts, but not Jones. He recognized the fact that training of the mind—education—meant quite as much as money. He realized that not being a college man handicaps one in the attainment of many ambitions. He is giving up his business; he is entering an eastern college. He is not getting an education in order that he may the more easily make money. Jones wants to learn how to live, and he thinks very wisely that education will help him to do it.

The other item concerned a young fellow, Brown, we'll call him, who has lived in luxury all his life, who has been thoroughly educated, and who has fallen heir to four millions of dollars. He is not contented, however, with merely being educated and rich. He wants to learn how to work, and so the story goes that he has got a job as a construction engineer at twenty dollars a week on the building which his grandfather is putting up for one of the great railroads.

Jones, having wealth and a good business developed by hard work, might have argued that these were enough and that training is superfluous. Brown, having both training and wealth, might well have concluded that hard work was not essential to his progress and enjoyment of life. They would both have been wrong.

The first case was a trover action.

Evelyn L. Morey vs. Albert A. Towne.

The plaintiff claimed that Towne, a deputy sheriff at the time, had wrongfully attached a Ford sedan, said to be the property of the plaintiff's husband, Melvin B. Morey. The car was seized on execution and sold at public auction.

Mrs. Morey claimed to have purchased a Chevrolet and showed receipts for payment made, afterwards trading for a Ford. The defense contended that the registration was in the name of Mr. Morey. A verdict was returned for the plaintiff of $61.00.

The next case, on Thursday, was that of Ernest W. Hutchins against Edward Perkins. This was an action for damages in a collision at the Crockett's Ridge and Norway Lake roads on June 10, 1927. The plaintiff claimed the collision occurred on his side of the road, and the defendant's willingness to settle at the time of the accident was claimed to be an admission of guilt. Damages of $100 were claimed. The defendant contended there was contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff in cutting the corner after he saw the approaching car, and also claimed the accident occurred on his side of the road. The big question was the location of the accident. The verdict was in favor of the defendant.

The case of the State vs. Thomas Norman and Peter Leblanc was tried Friday afternoon. They were indicted for breaking and entering the store of Julius Frank at Rumford. They were sentenced to two to three years in state prison.

John P. DiGrasso was indicted for larceny. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced to the Men's Reformatory at Windham.

Perley Faunce and Lowe Faunce pleaded guilty to manufacturing liquor. They were fined $100 each and sentenced to two months in jail.

The case of Ronald L. Cummings, charged with nuisance, was continued to May term.

Francis Hand of Rumford pleaded guilty to assault and was sentenced to five months in jail.

George W. Johnson of Rumford pleaded guilty to the charge of having a loan shark on custom side and loaning with usurious interest. He paid a fine of $100.

The petition presented by Eugene H. Parsons to the Stevens County for the protection of a Negro child and a woman for six months was held in the Negro's shadow of man. The custody of the two colored children, Perl and George, was given to the grandfathers of the children, George Davis of South Paris, and the petitioner was ordered to pay a weekly sum of $100 towards the support of said minor children.

Joseph Pittman was given a trial before a drawn jury in order to the sum of $1,000.00 of which he was given from James H. of Rumford. The Negro's defense, Wm. H. Pittman, Justice, George H. Pittman, and Joseph Pittman, testified that Pittman had the car and was going to return it in a few days, and that he wanted for New York and after driving it. The officers stated he told them he was going to New York when they arrested him in Rockford, Conn.

The respondent claimed that he telephoned the garage of Hobie and told him that he was going to be gone for four or five days and that Hobie told him he would be all right. He also claimed that he intended to return to Rumford with the car but that thought with the car had delayed him somewhat.

The jury deliberated nearly an hour and returned a verdict of guilty. The respondent was sentenced to from one to two years in state prison.

Arthur P. Mosher of Rumford retracted his plea of not guilty to larceny and was sentenced to six months in jail.

Ralph Mosher of Rumford retracted and pleaded guilty to larceny, and was sentenced to two months in jail.

William Sargent pleaded guilty to a charge of rape and the case was continued, he giving bail in the sum of $1000.

William Keller, alias Moses J. Smith, of Boston, charged with selling securities without a license, pleaded guilty and paid a fine of $100.

Alec Frigo of Rumford pleaded guilty to subordination of perjury, and the case was continued for sentence.

Frank Wedge of Rumford pleaded guilty to the charge of perjury, and his case also was continued.

Ernest Loised of Rumford pleaded guilty to breaking, entering and larceny, and was committed to the men's reformatory. Another case against him was continued.

The case of Bronis Belski for manufacturing was not pressed for lack of sufficient evidence, and Annie Belski was placed on probation for a year on the charge of manufacturing.

Arthur Bennett retracted and pleaded guilty on a charge of assault. He was placed on probation for a year, with Chief John Dennis as a special probation officer.

Tony Gongro pleaded guilty to larceny, and was placed on probation for a year. An indictment for breaking and entering was also continued for sentence.

Alfonso Hodgdon pleaded guilty to manufacturing liquor, and the case was continued for sentence.

Mike Galush pleaded guilty to illegal possession, and the case was continued for sentence.

The trial of James D. Kane of Boston, Mass., for manslaughter as a result of the death of Omar Beauchaine last Nov. 4th was held on Saturday.

A material witness for the state was James Pierce of Boston who was riding with Kane at the time of the accident.

He testified that they left Portland at 1:30 P. M. on the day of the accident and that they gave the victim and another fellow a ride for five miles outside of Bethel on the Rumford road at 6:30 that evening. He stated that he asked the respondent several times if he would let him drive the car because he thought that they were going too fast. He also stated that they were traveling about sixty miles an hour when they met another car on a turn and that the lights blinded Kane so that he lost control and it overturned.

Former Sheriff Wm. O. Frothingham, Deputies William L. Frothingham and John Harrington and constable Charles L. Davis all testified that Kane told them that he was traveling about 70 miles an hour when the accident happened and that the car did not belong to him but was stolen by him in Massachusetts. Harrington testified that Kane told him that he broke the speedometer on the Newburyport turnpike while traveling 72 miles per hour.

The defense put forth the argument that Kane was not driving recklessly as they claimed was shown by the fact that it took five hours for him to go a distance of about 100 miles. The identity of Kane to operate a car was shown by evidence of his having worked in garages for seven years and was very familiar with the handling of high powered cars. Kane testified that often the upcoming car saw his lights they turned on their own lights and this caused him.

The jury deliberated for half an hour and returned a verdict of guilty. The respondent was sentenced to from two to three years in state prison.

Nettie Hawley pleaded not guilty to a charge of nuisance and the case was continued to the May term.

Twenty-one divorces were granted as follows:

Alice M. Young from Wm. H. M. Young, cruel and abusive treatment.

Isaac Johnson Wilson from Isaac E. Wilson, cruel and abusive treatment. Custody of minor child given to the respondent.

Grace L. Taft from Grace L. Taft, desertion.

Grace L. Blackman from Chester B. Blackman, cruel and abusive treatment. Custody of minor child given to the respondent.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—With his chum, Gaspard Lecroix, half-breed, and their dogs, Brock appeared, youthful son of the Hudson Bay factor at Hungry House, wintering in the wilderness of the Yellow-Leg, trapping and trading. Pierre Lecroix, father of Gaspard, had disappeared with his dogs, leaving them to die of hunger before. Experienced trapper and woodsman, the complete disappearance of Lecroix and his dogs mystified those who knew him. Hungry is convinced he met with foul play.

CHAPTER II.—After a narrow escape from a terrible disaster—the loss of their canoe and the drowning of the boys reach the Yellow-Leg river. A schooner, faintly visible in the distance,引起 curiosity. Gaspard indulges in morbid thoughts concerning his lost father.

CHAPTER III.—Overestimating his strength, Brock has a severe fall. He is saved by Flash, his lead dog, who brings Gaspard to the scene. The boys reach a country which they had never seen before. The hunting prospects for a splendid fur catch are good. They find evidence of the presence of a white man, and at once suspect him with the missing schooner. Gaspard is convinced the presence of the vessel has some bearing on his father's fate.

CHAPTER IV.—Brock breaks Flash to harness, and the attachment between the boy and the magnificent pup deepens. Flash, in fair fight, kills a timber wolf. Gaspard stumbles on the trail of a deer, and learns it is one of his father's team. His friend purpose takes possession of him—to learn what happened to Pierre Lecroix. When he reaches the camp, Brock is taken prisoner by a party of Cree Indians and a white man.

Before dawn, Brock left the disappointed Flash at the camp, fastened to a tree by a leg, for his wounded neck would bear no collar, while he started to look for caribou. As the eastern sky grayed then turned to a bluish blue, Brock, with his hood over his face, shivered in a clump of scrub spruce on the edge of a muskeg that reached away into the shadow. Here, at dawn, the caribou, if there were any in the vicinity, would come to dig the snow with their round-toed hoofs from the white reindeer moss which grows on the barrens of the north.

Starting slowly from the forest at his right, Brock's eyes swept the barren. In the dim light he could see but a few hundred yards into the snowy plain, but caribou have poor eyes and if they were there, he could boldly stalk them upwind, while later, after sunrise, it would be more difficult.

Brock waited until the sun lifted to turn the expanse of snow before him into a shimmering plain of fire. It was no use; there were no deer within sight. After breakfast he would make a wide circle and follow the freshest tracks he could find, for he had resolved not to leave Flash and go back to the main camp for grub.

When he had hunted and skinned out the fur for which he had brought in the night before, he talked to his dog in a useless attempt to soothe him in his disappointment at being led up to camp when Brock took the trail.

He spent another day on the trail to the caribou, but, although he saw a trail crossing the barren at a great distance and followed it across frosty ice, he never came up with them. He was approaching his camp and wondering if Flash had broken loose by gnawing his wire leash, when he was surprised by a chorus of yelps.

"Hello, there! Got worried, did you?" he called to his partner.

The dogs of the team, tired to sleep in trees, joined Flash in a vociferous welcome.

"Hello, Koma, Yellow Eye, Little Bear, old socks! How're the pups?" Then not seeing a fire in the hole in the snow and receiving no answer from Gaspard, he knew that his partner had arrived early and was off on a hunt of his own. Brock built up the fire and started a good supper with the beans and caribou steak which he found on Gaspard's sled. As the early dark filled the spruce with purple shadows, the sleeping dogs waked to the creak of snow-shoes on the dry November snow.

"Well, you old villain!" cried Brock, as Gaspard appeared, under the Hudson Bay factor at Hungry House, wintering in the wilderness of the Yellow-Leg, trapping and trading.

Brock built up the fire and started a good supper with the beans and caribou steak which he found on Gaspard's sled. As the early dark filled the spruce with purple

A few days later, Gaspard and Brock, leaving their dogs wired to trees at camp to avoid their yelping, started on a two days' scout through the country to the north of the big lake. Obsessed by the discovery of the dog tracks in the snow, the memory of his father gave Gaspard no rest. And, moreover, for their own safety it was necessary to learn if the men who had made the tracks on the lake shores were still in the country.

Circling the upper end of the lake ten miles to the west, for they had no intention of leaving a trail across the white level which could be detected from the ridges to the north, Gaspard and Brock traveled through the back country. But that night as they crossed a spruce swamp and rested their ears against a tree, they were in frank dis-

"I don't think there's a soul within a hundred miles to the north of us," argued the skeptical Brock. "We must have made forty miles today and we haven't seen a shot track."

"They are cr. de lower lake or the riviere," grunted the stubborn Gaspard. "We fin' dem tomorrow."

Brock looked hard at his friend. "You really believe they are in the country?"

Gaspard nodded.

"Why?"

"From dat high ridge back dere, to day, I see smoke."

"You mean that haze?" Brock asked.

"So dat pup kill de old wolf, eh? Eat tak' good dog to do dat. When you no come home one sleep back, I think you hurt, mebbe."

"I knew you would show up looking for me," replied Brock, his eyes lighting with affection for his partner, "but Flash was too sore to travel, and I was afraid of wolves finding him here or I would have come back."

Eating a hearty supper, the boys sat by the hot fire of birch while Gaspard smoked a pipe of company cigar-head. After a silence, the half-breed blew a cloud of smoke from his mouth and said: "I see ver strange thing one sleep back. I cross trail of two wolf."

"What was strange in that?" queried Brock.

"One wolf had onlee tree toe on left hind foot."

"Caught in trap, sometime, but whose trap?" Brock was interested.

"Dat wolf was a dog," announced the other, quietly.

"A dog? What makes you think so, Gaspard?"

"Because my fader had a dog who mark a track lak dat-wid left hind foot."

"Your father"—Brock gazed intently into the somber features of his friend. "You say your fader had a dog abt a toe? Gee, that's strange! But how could she be traveling with a wolf? The wolves would kill her, of course."

"Not, I have hear ov such ting."

"You mean she might have mated with a wolf?"

"Ah-huh."

"And you're sure it was her track?"

"I would know et anyw'e."

Brock thrilled to the possibilities of the situation. A dog of the lost Pierre Lecroix—alive in the headwater country! "Then your fader must have been right here—last winter?" he said, excitedly.

Slowly the half-breed rose and dropping his mitten on the snow, he turned to the north. "I see the trail of the great lake and go return to the place home camp. By noon, they had put many miles of forest and barren behind them without crossing a trail."

"Gaspard, I don't believe they're in this—what in thunder do you see?" suddenly demanded Brock, as his friend stopped in his tracks, his eyes fixed on the trail.

"Not many weeks old, either."

"Now, what you say? Grindie demand the half-breed."

Brock shook his head. The pole was on him. "We're right as usual," he admitted with a forced smile. "They're fresh, these tracks, but they don't seem to lead over the lake."

Slowly the scouts reached the edge of a wide barren, and in order to learn whether native had entered it since the last lot of tracks passed it, separate, and, following the trail, met on the farther side.

Putting the skin case of his rifle into his shoulder pack, Brock pointed a shell from the magazine into the barrel of the 30-30, inserted it in its sheath on his belt, and started a cut-off thumb along its edge.

The winter on the Yellow-Leg was growing exciting. What if he walked into a couple of these strange Indians? What would he do?

Well, he decided, as he crunched along on his snowshoes over snow dry as sand, the bows crossing each other with a click audible for a hundred yards in the still air, he would kill them in Cree, and wait for them to move. But he'd have his right mitten off and his gun cocked!

After a few miles, the thrill in the strength of meeting the strangers, or of finding their trail, wore off. Gaspard was prejudiced by the death of his father. Because the older Indians had come to grief somewhere in this country, and there were now people wintering to the north, he took it for granted that they had a hand in his disappearance. But it was only guess—just a guess. Yes, thought Brock, as he propped his gun in a young spruce and knelt on a snow shoe to tighten a loose heel though he and Gaspard would probably never see these strangers again.

At the sudden click of snowshoes in the rear, the Cree turned his head as a heavy body catapulted into his back, hurling him face down in the soft snow. Through his startled brain flashed the thought of Pierre Lecroix, gasping for breath, he thrashed desperately with arms and legs, managed to grip his gun, and knelt on his snowshoes to break the grip which held him from the rear.

Hurt-buried in the snow, with no purchase of solid ground beneath him, he lay floundered, straining for a grip on the unused foot on his back, through Brock's dazed brain flashed the realization that his assailant had not killed him as he leaped—that he was trying to take him alive. Then the blood of the fighting McCains surged through the veins of the desperate boy. No Cree would take him, a half-breed, in a hand-to-hand fight! His fingers were抓紧 his belt, through Brock's dazed brain flashed the realization that his assailant had not killed him as he leaped—that he was trying to take him alive. CHURCH ACTIVITIESFIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

L. A. Edwards, Pastor
9:30 Church School. It is heartening indeed to know that our Primary Department is out-growing its accommodations; but send along your boys and girls, and we will find a place for them, and devoted teachers who will give them their best.

10:45 Morning Worship. May we not ask that as far as possible you will observe the blessed Lenten Season by regular attendance at the morning services of the church? And it is to be earnestly hoped that the spirit of real devotion may characterize these services.

The subject of the pastor's sermon on Sunday morning will be "Sanctuaries." Have we an altar? To it do we bring our willing offering of praise and prayer?

The Comrades of the Way had another good meeting last Sunday evening. Another good meeting is expected for this next Sunday evening. Come and help us to make it so.

The Church is about to buy some new hymn books. We are anxious to put three new books in each pew. If you would like to own your own book hand in your name to Miss Cleo Russell at the Post Office, or to Mrs. L. W. Ramsell. If you wish to contribute to the general Hymn Book Fund, either of these ladies will be glad of your subscription.

The Ladies Club will meet on Thursday afternoon at the Marion True Gehring Home.

METHODIST CHURCH

Our Church School meets Sunday morning 9:45.

Preaching Service 10:45, subject, "The Ninth Commandment."

At the Sunday evening meeting of the Epworth League, 6:30 p. m., we begin a series of discussion on the subject "Thinking Through the Problems of World Peace." The first topic in this series is "Why the Present Concern about War?" Almost everyone will agree that we must find a way to world peace, but there is great disagreement as to the proper method of securing the desired result. Wars have been the glory of the past. Shall they be of the future? Why do nations settle disputes by war while smaller groups have learned to settle peacefully? What are the advantages and disadvantages of the war method? We invite you to help answer these questions. They will undoubtedly lead to a lively discussion.

Regular Sunday evening service 7:30. Our evening crowds keep increasing as we shall be obliged to move to larger quarters. But never fear; we will find a place for you.

Our District Superintendent will hold the Last Quarterly Conference, Wednesday evening, February 27. We urge all the members of the Official Board to be present. This is the last official visit with us, so let us cheer him with our presence. The Epworth League will furnish a treat at the conclusion of business.

Did You Ever Stop to Think

That the man to whom your letter is going may be a splendid judge of what is good and correct in printing?

If your printed matter is poorly gotten up with obsolete type faces, printed with a slur, the ink unsuitable, and the stock inferior, the impression created may offset the effect of an otherwise good letter.

Printing is the smallest item of expense entering into your business and the difference between good printing and poor printing is so small that it is the poorest economy to use any but the best.

The best does not mean the most expensive—but the best suited to your business printing in which good type selection and harmony is used, good press work and the artist's touch that lifts it from the noticeably common to the pleasingly good.

Let us call and talk over your printing needs with you. Printing is our business and it is our business to know it.
